BUILT FOR A LIFETIME

“At Bauwerk Parkett, we give the uniqueness of nature the attention it deserves.”

Dear reader,
Wood is our element. It brings warmth and nature into the room, seamlessly connecting modern and traditional aspects.
At Bauwerk Parkett, we have been refining the authentic character of wood to create high-quality floors for over 90 years, redefining aesthetics and sustainability. Our passion is reflected in every parquet we make – floors that enrich your home, accompany you through life’s journey, and stand the test of time. Quite simply: Built for a Lifetime.

In a world that is changing faster than ever, wood remains a reliable anchor. No flooring enhances the atmosphere of a room or supports our well-being as much as parquet. Its natural beauty, warmth and durability make it a timeless companion. Every plank that leaves our factory is unique, crafted with precision and much passion for detail. It embodies the perfect combination of Swiss engineering and the power of nature. Our mission is to unite the best of both worlds.

In this issue, we take you on an inspiring journey through outstanding reference projects (pp. 25–40) that impressively showcase the diverse ways parquet by Bauwerk Parkett can be used. From the transformation of an urban villa in Berlin, defined by its use of natural materials, to the creative design of a modern office in Zurich, and the elegant renovation of a historical villa in Geneva – every project tells its own story. Furthermore, Salzburg’s traditions-rich ‘Hotel zum Hirschen’ demonstrates how our parquet not only impresses visually, but also enhances an overarching concept of sustainability.

We want to encourage you to be bold and try new things. So we urge you to look for inspiration not only in the following pages, but also on our social media and our website. Ideally though, you should experience parquet with all your senses in person, by visiting one of our Worlds of Parquet.

Discover how our floors shape spaces and ideas, and let yourself be guided in order to ultimately make your own vision a reality. Because our parquet is more than just a floor. It becomes a part of your life and accompanies you on your personal journey.

PHILOSOPHY

Created by nature and perfected through Swiss precision, Bauwerk Parkett means quality that lasts for generations. Our floors combine cutting-edge technology and handcrafted precision with the true beauty of nature for a home full of warmth, well-being, and life.

SWISS PIONEERING SPIRIT

At Bauwerk Parkett, we take pride in our origin and our traditions. At the same time, we always strive to achieve innovation and excellence. Even today, our main facility in St. Margrethen, Switzerland, remains the technological centrepiece of our work, a competence centre and production site responsible for creating over 60 % of Bauwerk Parkett's product range with passion, precision, and reliability.

Precise and smart
Having invented solid parquet in 1935, Swiss pioneer Ernst Göhner laid the cornerstone for creating Bauwerk Parkett. Over 90 years later, our dedication to perfection still drives our thinking and actions. We strive to make it possible for our clients to experience Swiss precision in all our products.

Our promise: We are precise in everything we do and deliver premium quality that always stays true to Swiss craftsmanship and tradition. With the latest technology and an ambitious design philosophy, we develop smart solutions and ground-breaking innovations that continue to revolutionise the industry.

FOR THE LOVE OF NATURE

For us, sustainability is not a trend but a company philosophy we pursue through our work. As part of this, we consistently emphasise wood as a naturally renewable raw material. Wood is a lasting, durable, versatile material that can be completely recycled, and each piece is unique.
Unlike other materials, wood stores large quantities of CO_2. We are privileged to use this fascinating natural product to make parquet floors.

Living and healthy material
98 % of our parquet is wood, an organic material that comes into being through unique living processes in nature. Simply put, wood just needs sunlight, air and water to grow. Compared to other types of flooring, manufacturing parquet is very energy-efficient because we effectively ‘only’ need to shape the raw material that nature has already given us. Most of the energy is used for drying the wood, and we even manage to keep this process CO_2-neutral as we reuse waste wood.

Manufacturing parquet involves other materials besides wood, such as adhesives, lacquers, and oils. At Bauwerk Parkett, all these components meet our high ‘100 % healthy living’ standard, which is confirmed by independent bodies, including the strict requirements of the eco-INSTITUT label.

Lasting for generations
With regular care, wooden floors are highly durable, boasting incredible longevity, allowing them to last for decades. Nevertheless, life tends to leave its trace on everything, and parquet is no exception. Compared to many other types of flooring, authentic wood floors have a decisive advantage: you can touch them up, partially repair them, or even wholly sand them off. This means that parquet can be a timeless and lifelong companion for your home: renewable, repairable and capable of preserving its value for a long time.

Controlled origin
‘Sustainability’ is originally a forestry term referring to a method for managing a forest whereby consumption does not exceed what nature can produce. For our parquet, we only use wood from controlled forestry sites. All our production sites are FSC®-certified, and we consistently work towards increasing the share of FSC® or PEFC®-certified wood. We try to keep the supply routes for wood as short as possible. Hence, we procure 97 % of the wood (oak, beech, etc.) from Europe, and only 3 % comes from North America (walnut and maple).

Our contribution to a better quality of life
Only parquet can have such a positive effect on the entire impact of a room and, therefore, our well-being. And we would like to bring this feeling to organisations that need it. Every year, through our Parquet Magic campaign, we support charity projects by donating parquet for a good cause. As a brand, we wish to continue the charitable activities carried out by our founder, Ernst Göhner.

MASTERING MATERIALS

As a wood-processing company, we always feel obligated to treat the resources available to us in a sustainable, forward-looking and responsible way. Bauwerk Parkett took up the task of research and development in wood technology as early as the beginning of the 1950s. Since then, we have become the innovation leader in our industry, as our head facility in Switzerland continuously develops new features that increase performance and longevity or stand out for their unique design.

Leading through innovation
Innovative strength is deeply anchored in Bauwerk Parkett's DNA. Even today, our in-house research and development division is one of the industry's most significant, bringing together colleagues who strive every day to explore the possibilities of working with wood as a material. With great flair for aesthetics and functionality, we always bring forth the unrivalled features of authentic wood, further expanding the boundaries of what is possible.

Thus, for example, Bauwerk Parkett became not only the first parquet producer but also the first company in the world to certify its entire production facility as compliant with life cycle principles.

Table of contents

Wood behaves differently in different environments, which you first need to understand in order to master it. This is why Bauwerk Parkett has its own climate rooms used to simulate various climatic zones and analyse the behaviour of wood under different conditions. Another field of research that Bauwerk Parkett pursues exclusively in-house at its main facility in Switzerland is developing natural, healthy-living wood colours. These are used to refine countless parquet formats, heightening the effect these floors make more than any other feature.

“Since for us the longevity of our floors is a core quality feature, we have created the Bauwerk ID, which features a unique number. It leaves a lasting mark on your floor, serving as a seal of quality and making value visible.”

Andrew Clare, Head of Products at Bauwerk Group

For us, innovation means much more than just new or improved parquet. Innovation also means that our clients can visualise their homes virtually featuring various parquet floors. Or that, with us, they can find customised solutions for stairs and ventilation grids and perfectly matched cleaning and care products.

At Bauwerk Parkett, you get a service that encompasses everything: from non-binding consulting and finding a professional installation partner to support from our experts even after installation.

Originally built as lodging for military personnel, with a low roof and many small rooms, this bungalow in Berlin was converted into a modern three-storey villa. The atrium in the heart of the house was developed to create a balance between intimacy, openness and connection. This centralised arrangement enables fluid transitions between the different areas of the house and provides a direct connection to nature. Thus, special attention was also placed on using natural, high-quality materials in the living areas.

Discreet elegance
Natural materials and high-quality surfaces define the interiors' aesthetics. The solid wood structures on the walls and ceilings were left exposed, combined with parquet floors and matching stairs, creating a cosy atmosphere, which balances well with the view of the lush trees outside the large windows. The Silverline Edition planks are made of particularly straight, carefully hand-picked oak trees. The cut of these planks creates fine, straight longitudinal lines in the grain, which is a feature that represents exclusive quality.

The film production company moved to its new office space in Zurich's Binz district in summer 2024. Over the last few years, the former industrial estate has been transformed into a lively, creative quarter. The architects from balbek bureau left many of the indoor surfaces in a refined raw state, with a great deal of exposed concrete and sanded cement screed on the floor. In contrast, the central lounge area, used for team meetings and relaxation, is deliberately made to stand out with its warm parquet floor.

A lively space for work
The creative Spinpark floor collection was used to design the surface. Laid in a classic shipdeck pattern, this 40-square-metre authentic wood floor surprises with its unusual and dynamic presentation. This is achieved thanks to the diagonal orientation of the grain relative to the planks. With the grain of the wood at 45° relative to the plank, Spinpark, developed by the Swiss architect and design firm atelier oï, offers completely new possibilities for floor aesthetics.

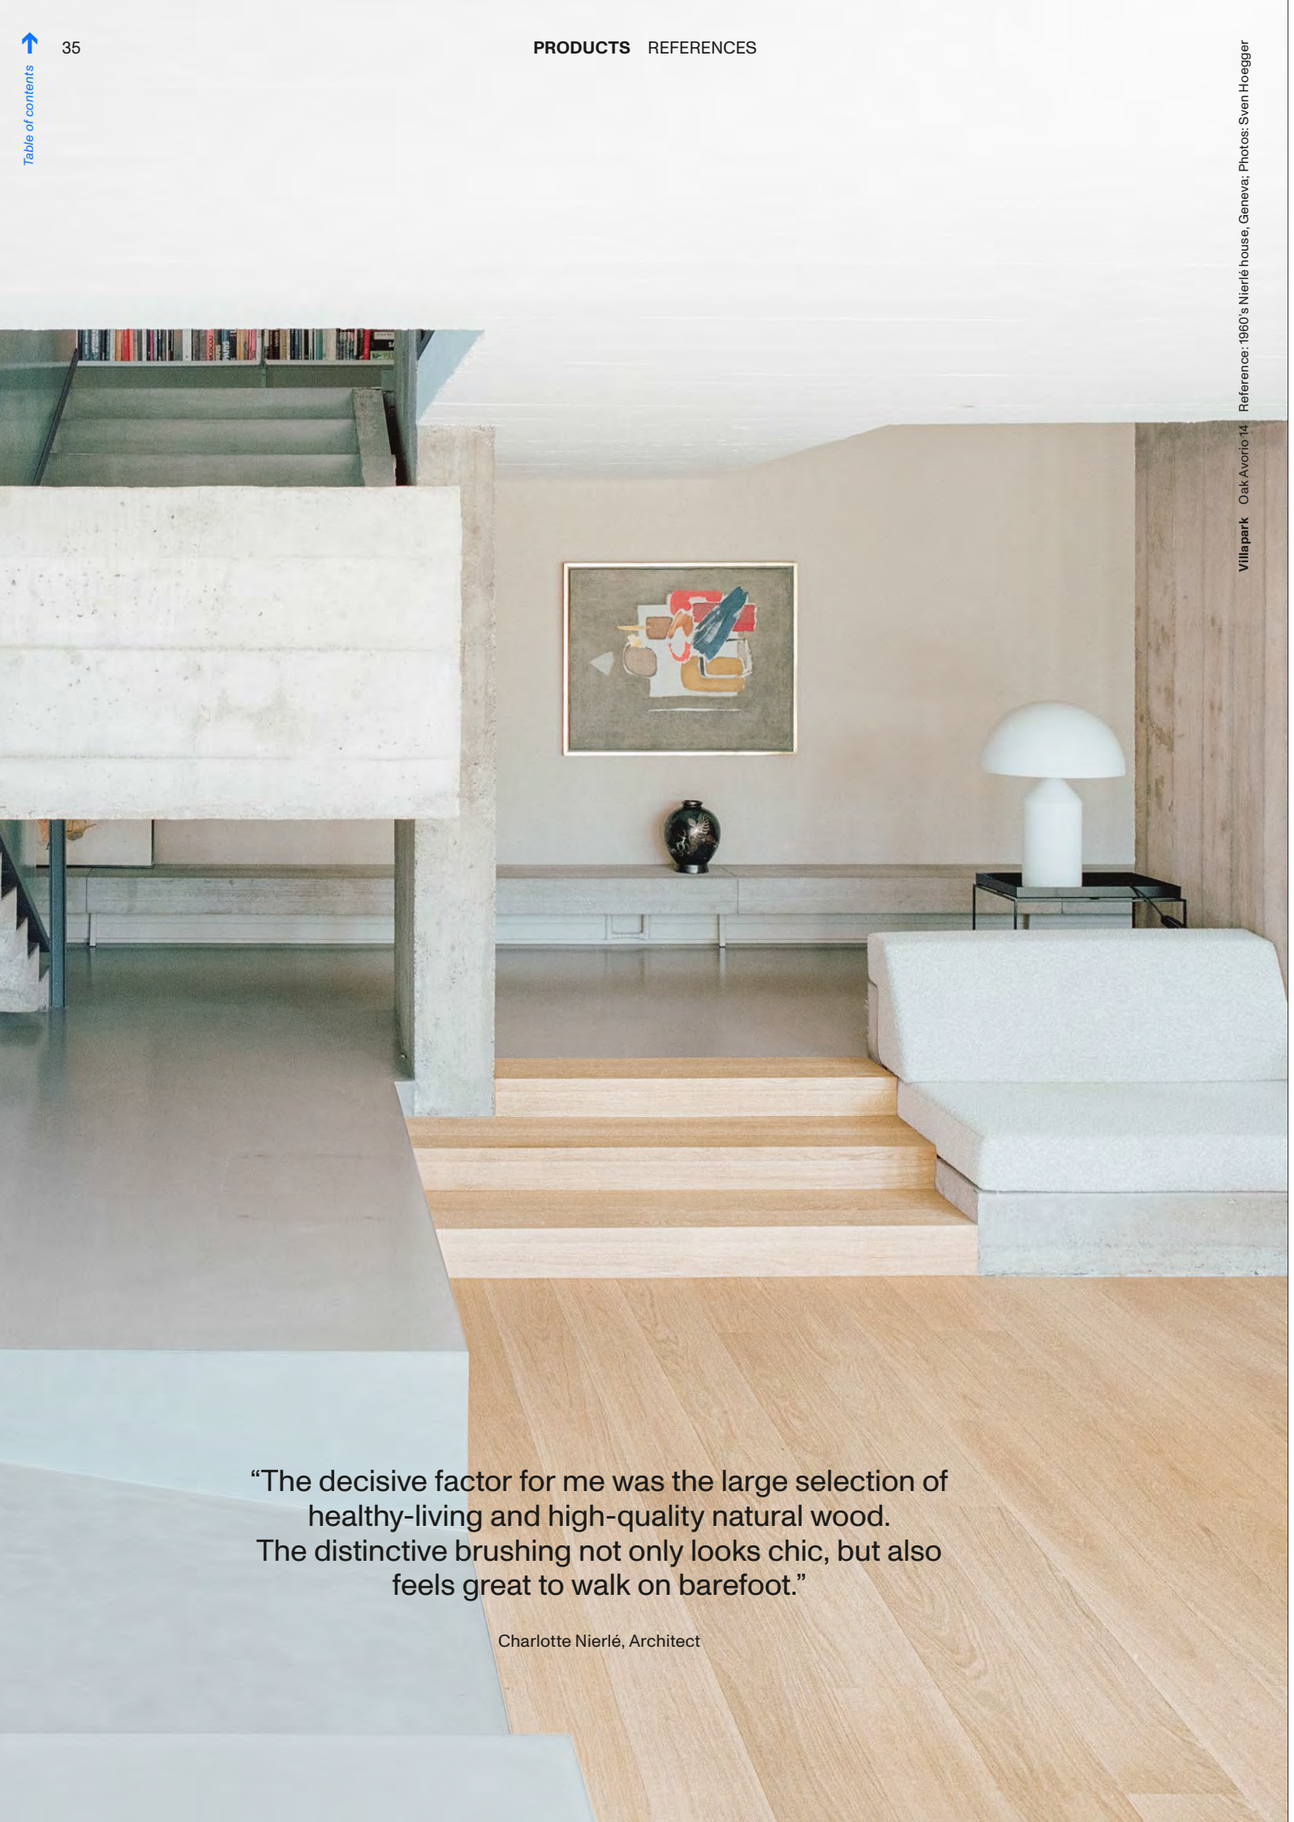

Nature's work of art
Spinpark provides a perfect setting for the lounge area at Dynamic Frame's new office. The rectangular parquet area has an aspect ratio of 4:3. balbek bureau has used this reference to the classic image format on many office surfaces, reminding the viewer of the film production company's work.

"The decisive factor for me was the large selection of healthy-living and high-quality natural wood. The distinctive brushing not only looks chic, but also feels great to walk on barefoot."

Charlotte Nierlé, Architect

A historic villa near Geneva underwent a comprehensive and energetic renovation that treated the building's existing volumes respectfully and aimed to preserve its authentic character. The architect, Charlotte Nierlé, chose the large 1-strip planks of the Villapark format to create a cosy atmosphere in the living spaces.

Respecting the original
The indoor spaces are characterised by the extensive presence of exposed concrete in wall surfaces, room dividers and stairs, as well as armchair and sofa pedestals, underscoring their minimalistic nature. A parquet floor was used to visually separate the lower-lying living spaces from the rest of the ground floor. Here, the architect deliberately chose the Villapark 1-strip-planks. These large, 2100 × 190 mm planks have bevels on their long sides, further emphasising their dimensions. The light-coloured oak offers a worthy frame for the furniture Edouard Nierlé, the architect's grandfather, designed for this house himself.

The tradition-rich Hotel zum Hirschen has belonged to the same family since 1830, as its members have spent centuries turning it into the prestigious Salzburg hotel that it is today. The Richter-Wallmann couple, representing the family's 11th generation, took over the property a few years ago, bringing innovative ideas and a holistic view of nature and people. This project demonstrates impressively how existing buildings, new buildings and high-quality outdoor and greenery design can be combined in a sustainable overall concept within an urban environment.

Modern timber construction meets tradition
The historical hotel building and its 106 rooms and suites underwent careful renovation. Indoors, you can feel the charm of bygone times, while the design also offers linear, purist elements with select natural wood and green colours, elegant furniture and lights, and refined details made of bronzed brass. It is only natural that in selecting the flooring, the owners and the architects went for a sustainable, high-quality product.

Parquet for a harmonious result
In the hotel rooms, a cosy atmosphere is created by the natural oiled, deep-brushed oak planks from the Cleverpark 1250 collection, in the Oak Farina colour. In the lobby and dining room, the hotel's guests are welcomed by a warm-coloured, slightly brushed strip parquet from the Unopark series, laid in a herringbone pattern, which offers a refined, high-quality stage for the space's modern, linear interior.

CREATIVE FREEDOM

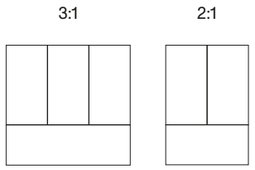

Just like nature itself, parquet is a master of transformation. Subtle changes in the wood's features, colours, formats, and, most of all, laying patterns make parquet synonymous with diversity that knows no bounds.

The idea is irresistibly simple, and despite that, no one had thought of it before. Being unique and simple the 3:1 and 2:1 proportions of its planks, Formpark can be laid in both a parallel and an orthogonal pattern, creating architecturally inspired patterns and maximum design freedom.

Individuality and diversity of form
With Formpark, diverse patterns emerge, from calm to lively, from classic to avant-garde, based on the way the parquet is installed and how light falls on it. Smooth transitions from one pattern to another are also possible. The person who came up with this brilliant idea is Stephan Hürlemann, an architect and designer from Zurich, who developed the exclusive authentic wood floor for Bauwerk Parkett together with the designer Simon Husslein. This floor represents a departure from modern style, and thanks to its individuality and diversity of form, Formpark always brings a contemporary look to wherever it is used.

More creativity for smaller spaces
The further development in the Formpark Mini format also enables countless variations of patterns and floor typologies with a lot of space for custom design. Thanks to its small dimensions, it creates powerful looks even in smaller rooms.

Multifaceted and striking
Thanks to the 5:1 dimension ratio of its planks, Formpark Quadrato can be adapted to many different floor designs. Therefore, in addition to classic herringbone, in which the planks lie at a right angle to each other, other geometric patterns are possible, like the cube or ladder patterns. The format presents a clear, structured aesthetic, and depending on the arrangement, can give the room more depth.

"With creative laying patterns, such as those featuring Formpark Quadrato, light sweeps gently over the surface of the planks, making for a lively mood and forming natural shadows, which further enhance the visual effect of the room."

Formpark Rombico Oak Nature 14 Laying pattern 7

Reinterpretations of classic patterns
Thanks to the 45° angle of its individual strips, Formpark Rombico is perfect for laying parquet in a French herringbone pattern, also known as chevron. This pattern is formed by the individual strips of parquet creating a set of diagonal lines that give the room a new perspective. The large dimensions of the individual planks make it possible to reinterpret other laying patterns as well, whether you prefer more explicit shapes or are looking for a dynamic zig-zag design.

PRODUCTS CREATIVE FREEDOM

“The floor is the most important reference point that people have in a room. It brings spaces to life, defining them and their surroundings. You could say that the floor is the cornerstone for creating material reality and emotional security.”

Juri Roemmel, Art Director at Bauwerk Group

A play on natural diagonals and a metamorphosis of forest to parquet: the concept of Spinpark is down-to-earth and simple. On the other hand, the close interconnection of nature and the craft of laying parquet, paired with a new cutting technique, brings out a completely new space for creativity in flooring. It offers unique visual compositions that are a fitting match for the versatility of wood as a material.

Inspired by Nature
In developing this new authentic-wood floor product, Bauwerk Parkett collaborated with the renowned Swiss architect and design firm atelier oï, which had to work closely with the natural material of wood. Observing nature, thinking with one's hands, and experimenting with materials is an integral component of atelier oï's DNA. Their vision: Good Design. Located on the idyllic bank of Lake Biel in La Neuveville, the Swiss architecture and design studio is surrounded by nature, which is a perfect source of inspiration for projects like Spinpark.

Outstanding design
The principle that makes the format so special is a simple rotation, or a 'spin': with the grain of the wood rotated 45° relative to the plank, Spinpark opens entirely new possibilities for floor optics. The Red Dot Award jury also recognised the benefits of this innovation in parquet design, honouring the achievement with the product Red Dot Award: Product Design 2024.

reddot winner 2024

Large variety of composition options
Depending on the arrangement of the planks, a chevron pattern can be created, which looks similar to the natural structure of a leaf, thus bridging the gap with the origin of the parquet. Spinpark can be laid in parallel and herringbone patterns, offering a large variety of composition options. Special feature: With Spinpark, you can intentionally achieve the popular chevron look even with a parallel installation method.

Facets of light
When designing a space, it is important to consider lighting. The warmth of the light changes our perception of the floor and affects our mood. Cool light can be rather refreshing and invigorating and is preferred in work contexts. Warm light, on the other hand, creates a sense of comfort and builds a cosier atmosphere, perfect for relaxing spaces like bedrooms and living rooms.

Unique interplay of colour
The natural temperature of light changes throughout the day, emphasising the fine features of parquet in its many facets. That is why it is important to consider the room's lighting when choosing a parquet.

Laying pattern and orientation
Shipdeck is the most common laying pattern, in which the planks are offset relative to each other longitudinally. However, more creative laying patterns have been enjoying a remarkable revival for some time: the herringbone pattern with its refined chevron look and other traditional laying patterns are again being used. Once you decide on the laying pattern, there is still the question of whether the parquet will be installed longitudinally, transversally or diagonally relative to the room. In general, we recommend aligning the pattern with the direction of the light.

Natural and spacious
The interplay between hand-picked oak planks of different widths and lengths of up to four metres adds a sense of prestige and uniqueness to the room, doing credit to Unicopark's name. Our parquet experts carefully plan the arrangement based on your floor plan, ensuring a harmonious interplay of different lengths and widths and highlighting the room's features.

The patina makes the wood‘s structure visible, creating a unique charm that captivates and conjures up dreams of bygone times. This vintage appearance is precisely why these used-look floors are perfect for creating a modern interior style with personality.

The manufacture
The used-look surfaces result from an elaborate process that gives the planks their unmistakable character. They are placed in large trays and thoroughly washed with pyramid-shaped stones, following a method similar to how used-look jeans are made. They then undergo a unique staining treatment that adds a distinctive patina and authentic signs of wear to every plank.

KNOWLEDGE

Parquet offers virtually endless design options, whether in the kitchen, bathroom or with children and pets in the household. In the ‘Knowledge’ category, we answer important questions, demonstrate the advantages of authentic wood floors, and give you specific recommendations for possible next steps.

PARQUET MYTHS

What is the difference between parquet and laminate?

Parquet is a high-quality natural product made of authentic wood that impresses with its unique look, feel and sustainability. No two floors are the same, bringing warmth and individuality to the room. At first glance, laminate floors appear so similar to parquet that you can mistake one for the other. This is because of the wood look, which is surface-printed onto decorative paper. The quality difference becomes apparent not only in the feel and the sheen of the product but also in the acoustics: laminate makes significantly more noise when walked on. Unlike parquet, laminate cannot be renovated or reworked, meaning it has a much shorter lifespan.

Can you also lay parquet in the bathroom or in the kitchen?

With the right preparations and care, parquet can work well in a kitchen or a bathroom. Bauwerk Parkett's high-quality, full-area bonded parquet with carefully sealed joints prevents moisture from accumulating under the floor or in cracks. Special water – and dirt-repellent surface treatments are also available. This means that our parquet can easily withstand even small sprays of water.

Do underfloor heating and parquet work together?

Parquet is more than an eye-catching feature in the room: it brings cosiness and warmth, and if combined with underfloor heating, it becomes a very special experience when walking barefoot. Parquet by Bauwerk Parkett is well-suited for installation over both electric and warm-water underfloor heating.

Is parquet a good idea for households with children and pets?

Mishaps are common in homes with children and pets, and parquet must be durable enough to withstand them. Because of its robustness and innovative surface treatments, the high-quality and healthy-for-living authentic wood floors by Bauwerk Parkett are well-protected and forgiving.

Is parquet suitable for people with allergies?

An authentic wood floor is a perfect choice for people with allergies because it does not accumulate dust or dirt, thus creating a hygienic environment. Our B-Protect® lacquer prevents particles from attaching to the floor surface, thus simplifying cleaning. Parquet also has antibacterial properties, meaning that it is the best flooring option for households with people with allergies.

Is parquet more expensive than other types of flooring?

At first glance, parquet might seem like a bigger investment. Still, its advantages make up for the price difference: Our authentic wood floors are precision-made to a high-quality standard, with an extremely long lifespan, preserving their natural beauty for decades. Parquet by Bauwerk Parkett will also increase the value of your property: it is an investment that pays off in the long run and brings joy to generations.

Does the colour of parquet change due to sunlight?

Wood is a natural product, and its natural colour takes time to develop. Different types of wood can go darker or lighter, or even change their colour. Smoked wood shows little change in its colour. Floors with Bauwerk Parkett's innovative B-Protect® surface treatment are more UV-stable than other products, retaining their original colour for years.

How costly is parquet to clean and maintain?

Cleaning and care of various surfaces is easy and uncomplicated. For routine cleaning, it is enough to remove loose dirt with a broom or a vacuum cleaner. A damp mop and a suitable cleaning agent are needed for a more thorough cleaning. Bauwerk Parkett offers appropriate products to suit your floor.

Can parquet be renovated?

Parquet stands out for its robustness. However, when it comes to removing signs of wear accumulated over years, even decades of use, parquet has one decisive advantage compared to other types of flooring: it can be renovated. Replacing individual planks, sanding the entire surface or giving the floor a completely new look with surface treatments: all of this is possible with parquet.

The thicker the top layer, the better: is that true?

The longevity of parquet is not primarily defined by the thickness of the top layer; instead, it is determined by the structural quality of the top layer, the quality of its grip, and the precision of its processing. When sanding a parquet, you usually remove 0.5–0.7 mm from its top layer. This means that any floor by Bauwerk Parkett can be sanded multiple times.
